SECTION A: READING SKILLS (22 marks)

Reading Comprehension Through Unseen Passages

1. Read the following text.

1. During his recent visit to India, the world golf champion Tiger Woods was all praise for the players at the Delhi Golf Club. As golf gains ground as a corporate sport in India, many top-level Indian corporates will be heading for a game with professionals, such as Tiger Woods. Participating in these events, where amateurs play with professionals, comes for a hefty fee.

2. The long-term advantages of these fleeting interactions on the golf course with professionals are debatable. But for corporates playing besides a powerhouse of talent can definitely up their game. This was the general opinion even among the spectators who had watched Tiger Woods in Delhi. Munjal, the amateur player along with him, was also impressed with his game. "Quite a swing, right?", he commented.

3. But even those who cannot afford the hefty charges of a top professional, investing in their game by hiring a professional coach has benefits. According to other golf consultants, several Indians are also attending 'golf clinics' abroad for specific programmes to improve their game. According to Butch Harmon, the professional, who has worked with Tiger Woods, a short course generates more power in the swing and in aligning shots. These changes though minor have long-term benefits. In golf, marginal improvements are subtle and small changes like tweaking the position of the hand on the club or learning how to aim your body before swinging the club, can be mastered during these short-term interactions, yield results.

4. Another way for Indian golfers to keep connected internationally is through the online golf community. According to Sandeep Sarkar, his experience at the British coach David Leadbetter's academy was most fruitful. 'They showed me a video of my game and I saw how bad I was in some positions.'

5. As golf is a technical game, unlike football or other sports, playing every day will not necessarily improve one's game. Hence, amateur golfers are also travelling to Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia, Singapore, and Dubai, for sessions that combine a three-day course play with a one-day clinic with a professional golfer. This is a huge improvement from the standard of coaching available in India. As most Indian trainers are caddies turned coaches, they teach by trial and error.

2. Read the passage carefully:

1. At least a third of the huge ice fields in Asia's towering mountain chain are doomed to melt due to climate change, according to a report, with serious consequences for almost two billion people. Even if carbon emissions are dramatically and rapidly cut and succeed in limiting global warming to 1.5°C, 36% of the glaciers along the Hindu Kush and Himalaya range will have gone by 2100. If emissions are not cut, the loss soars to two-thirds, the report found.

2. The glaciers are a critical water store for the 250 million people who live in the Hindu Kush Himalaya (HKH) region, and 1.65 billion people rely on the great rivers that flow from the peaks into India, Pakistan, China and other nations. "This is the climate crisis you haven't heard of," said Philipus Wester of the International Centre for Integrated Mountain Development (ICIMOD), who led the report. pot for climate change impacts."

3. The new report, requested by the eight nations, on the mountains span, is intended to change that. More than 200 scientists worked on the report over five years. Until recently the impact of climate change on the ice in the HKH region was uncertain, said Wester. "But we really do know enough now to take action, and action is urgently needed," he added. The HKH region runs from Afghanistan to Myanmar and is the planet's "third pole", harbouring more ice than anywhere outside Arctic and Antarctica. Limiting the global temperature rise to 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels requires cutting emissions to zero by 2050. This is felt to be extremely optimistic by many but still sees a third of the ice lost, according to the report. If the global rise is 2°C, half of the glaciers will be projected to melt away by 2100.

4. Since the 1970s, about 15% of the ice in the HKH region has disappeared as temperatures have risen. But the HKH range is 3,500 km long and the impact of warming is variable. Some glaciers in Afghanistan and Pakistan are stable and a few are even gaining ice, most probably due to increased cloud cover that shields the sun and changed winds that bring more snow. But even these will start melting with future warming, Wester said.

5. The melting glaciers will increase river flows through to 2050 to 2060, he said, pushing up the risk of high-altitude lakes bursting their banks and engulfing communities. But from the 2060s, river flows will go into decline. The Indus and central Asian rivers will be most affected. But the changes to spring melting already appear to be causing the pre-monsoon river flow to fall just when farmers are planting their crops. "Worse, the monsoon is also becoming more erratic and prone to extreme downpours." said Wester. (Created for academic usage.)

Answer the following questions, based on given passage.

i. Based on the report about the melting of glaciers in the Hindu Kush and Himalaya range mentioned in paragraph (1 & 2), what are two potential benefits that could be derived from this study?
